PERTINENT COMMENT

RANDOM REMARKS OF TRAIL TRAMPS

It all started at the beach recently. With Jay E. Randall, editor, lawyer and banker successively and successfully, and our respective families, I was enjoying a day of real rest. The conversation ran something like this: "Wish we could have some more hikes like we used to take in the mountains."

"Those were good old times, when we used to go up Mt. Wilson about every other month, and vary the program with a trip to Barley Flats or down the Santa Anita."

"Don't believe you could stand a hike like that—you've been sticking indoors so long you are too soft."

"You look kind of fat yourself. I'll bet you couldn't stand it to carry a pack to West Fork."

"Only one way to settle that argument. Let's try it."

"You're on. When?"

"Next week-end."

Chose a Hot Day.

Perhaps it was part of the test that Friday proved to be the hottest day of the season. But he arrived on the noon car, just after the News was off the press, like he used to as long ago as 1908.

Jay thought my hiking shoes looked so heavy he would have an advantage. He is too fair for that, so he took his new boots to Henry Olsen to load him down with some hobnails. I prefer Henry's non-skid Gro-cords myself. Went to the Venture Inn for a lunch.

"Sierra Madre certainly has changed. Never used to have a place where we could buy as good a meal when I came up here."

It was nine years since we had travelled the Sturtevant Trail together. Changes began to appear in the early stages of the trip. Billy Corum's extension of the auto road was the first. Nice big parking place, nearly half a mile further as you go up and the first place for a cold drink as you come down. E. B. Gray's Little Gray Inn is new, half a mile this side of Clark's Halfway House, which has doubled several times in size.

Growth is Apparent.

Increase in trail traffic and number of camps and cabins is not the only thing that is noticeable after a long absence from the mountains. We got to making frequent comparisons.

Opposite the big slide where the trail makes the short cut down toward the First Water, there is a big boulder with a basin in the top.

"See that boulder with the hole in it. Used to loom up above the brush. Now the brush is so much taller the rock is nearly covered."

The Cabin We Did Not Build.

"Here's where we hit the bottom of the canyon. Remember this little bench where we picked a cabin site in the fall of 1909? There was not a cabin in the Santa Anita then. Next year the Swillikens built their 'den' and then the forest service opened up the canyon for leasing sites and it got so common we gave up our little project."

Found Fletcher Hayward at the rangers' cabin dolling up his saddle trappings. With the help of Thad Roe, hired as a deputy patrolman by the Cabin Owners' Protective Association, he has been able to stop the cabin breaking and depredations which made life miserable for those who were not able to stay in their cabins all the time. Roberts' Camp and store now present the most pretentious buildings to be found along the canyon, vastly improved since Joe Clark has been in charge.

Close to Broadway.

"Here's Fern Lodge. Let's stop awhile and rest."

"If I stop to rest I'll never get going again."

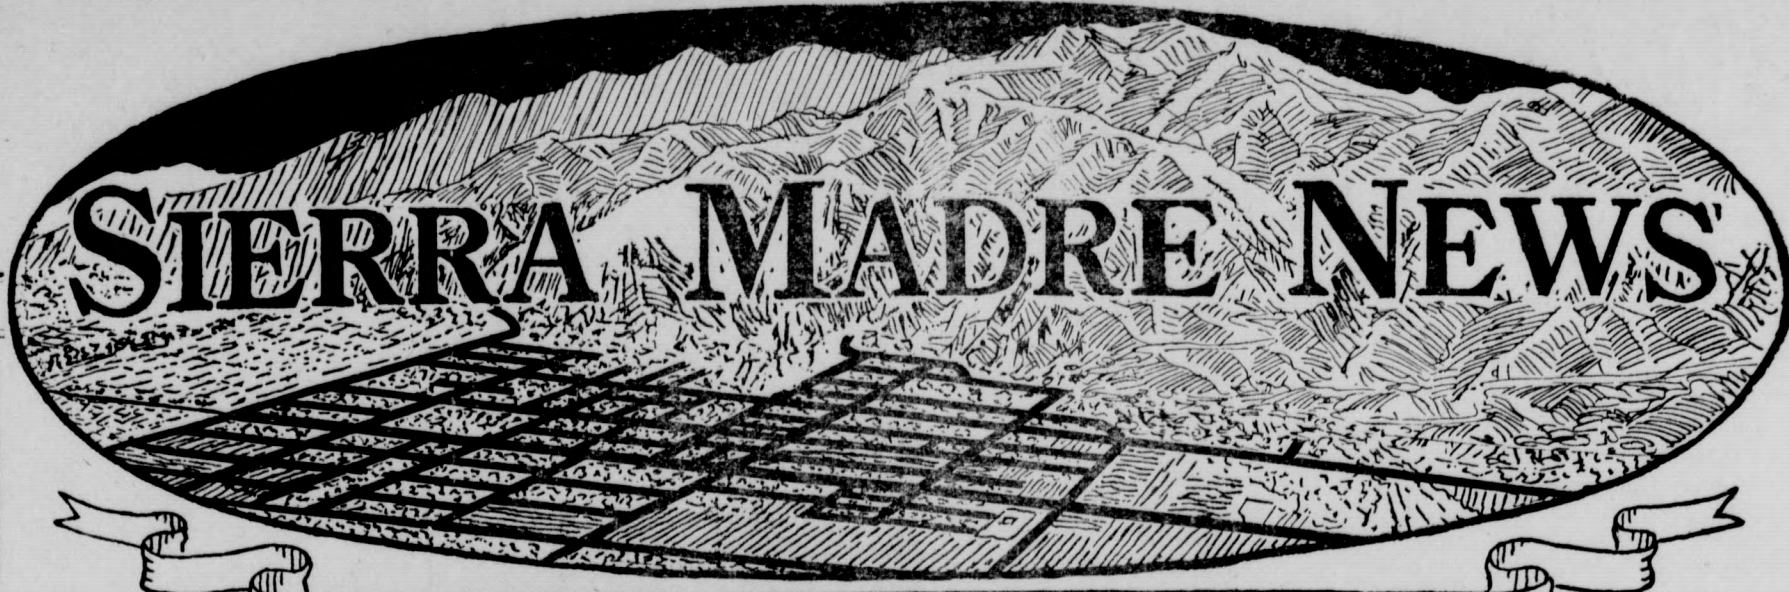

"Why, hello, Jack! Gee, you're looking fine. All the girls will be glad to know how well you are up here. How's the radio working?"

"Fine. Come inside and listen while you rest."

"Never heard any better radio music than that. Some people have an idea that being down in the canyon would interfere with the transmission, but they are evidently wrong."

"Well, let's be on our way before we get so comfortable here we won't

Gas Business Shows Growth Of This City

"Anticipating the growth of Sierra Madre and the other cities forming the Monrovia-Sierra Madre district of the Southern Counties Gas Company, that public service company is spending $50,000 in this territory," said W. E. Keefe, district superintendent of the gas company, in an interview today with the News.

"Sierra Madre in 13 months has gained 390 gas consumers," continued Mr. Keefe. "Monrovia has gained 474 and other parts of this district have added many new gas consumers during the past year. Today this city has 1200 gas consumers, while last year there were but 890 here. Monrovia today has 2215, as compared with 1741 in July, 1921. Arcadia at that time had 351 consumers; today there are 500 consumers there. El Monte today has 500, as compared with 380 13 months ago."

Whole District Grows

"A year ago the entire district, Monrovia, Sierra Madre, South Santa Anita, Arcadia, El Monte and Duarte, had a total of 3580 gas consumers. Today this has been increased to 4690, a gain in 13 months of more than 31 per cent."

"We are installing new transmission and distribution mains, larger compression units, bigger regulators, all with the view of meeting the growing demands for natural gas service here. While a large part of the $50,000 has been put into new buildings, both here and in Monrovia, a considerable sum is going into the transmission and distribution equipment."

"As Sierra Madre grows, so grows the Southern Counties Gas Company, and we shall meet the increasing demands for service with a greater supply of natural gas."

DIVERT TRAIL TRAFFIC FROM SIERRA MADRE

Monrovia and Arcadia Would Like More Direct Connection with Resorts.

Plans to build roads and trails giving Monrovia and Arcadia more direct connection with the camp resorts of the Big Santa Anita Canyon and West Fork of the San Gabriel received an impetus last week. Representatives of the Chambers of Commerce of the two cities spent two days in the resort, becoming familiar with the resort business and studying possible routes.

Two distinct enterprises are proposed. One contemplates an extension of the highways from Arcadia into the mouth of the canyon at a point where a trail could be built to connect with the Sturtevant Trail. It is estimated the Sturtevant Trail could be shortened two or three miles, giving a correspondingly quicker access to the camps for both hikers and packers. The other plan calls for the building of a trail from the present terminus of the road in Cloverleaf Canyon above Monrovia, around Clamshell Canyon and along the east slope of the Big Santa Anita to the camps. This trail would practically eliminate climbing after leaving the highest point which can be reached by autos.

Expense of the trail building would have to be met largely by funds raised in Monrovia and Arcadia, though it is said an effort will be made to enlist the aid of the forest service. The plan to build a road into the canyon from Arcadia would also be subject to the desires of the Baldwin ranch interests, who have never looked with favor upon the public having access to the lower canyon, on account of possible damage to water pipes and intake.

Monrovia papers call attention to the fact that from 5,000 to 7,000 people pass over the Sturtevant Trail for a single holiday or week-end. The annual freighting bill for packing provisions and other supplies over the trail amounts to $7,000. All this looks like attractive business which Monrovia merchants would like to divert their way, and the camp owners are naturally interested in having the best and most direct route of travel from their supply base.

Mrs. Victor Hill entertained with an afternoon of bridge last Friday. The guests included Mrs. Ernest Yerxa of Pasadena, Mrs. George Starr, Mrs. Randolph Wood, Mrs. Innis Kinney, Mrs. George B. Morgridge, Mrs. Donald Ashmore, Mrs. Roland Adams and Mrs. Hall Perry.

KIRCHHOFFER WILL LEAD SING AGAIN

Sessions of Community Sing Are Expected to Start Latter Part of September.

Hugo Kirchhofer has been secured to conduct the Sierra Madre Community Sing for the coming year. A preliminary meeting of the organization committee was held Monday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. It is expected that regular sessions of the Sing will begin about the end of September.

The successful work accomplished last year and the great reputation achieved all over Southern California, give grounds for expecting great things in full chorus work the coming year. The fact that Sierra Madre has the services of the greatest sing leader in the country is something to be proud of and should command complete community support.

Committee at Work

Members of the organization committee are Mrs. J. Milton Steinberger, Miss Edith Blumer, Miss Eleanor Bayne, Fred Griebenow and Major C. S. Floyd. They have addressed the following communication to the supporters of the enterprise and to those who should be its supporters:

"Dear Promoter of Community Spirit:

"Sierra Madre has again been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Hugo Kirchhofer in directing our Community Sing. If you attended the Community Sing during the past season we need not tell you of his wonderful ability to bring out your desire and capability, no matter how well concealed, of expressing yourself in song. If you did not avail yourself of the pleasure of participation in the Community Sings last year we want you to come this season in order that you may take part in this movement promoting public spirit and community interest in Sierra Madre."

"Do not try to visualize what a Community Sing is, but come and experience an ideal. Such opportunities are rare, but in a Community Sing under the direction of Mr. Kirchhofer these conditions are realized."

"We are counting upon your co-operation to insure another successful season of the Sierra Madre Community Sing."

NOBODY FAVORS REMOVING TREE

Sentiment Merely Demands Correcting of Conditions Which Hinder Business.

The topic, "Removal of Pepper Tree in Front of Pettitt's Store," proved to be an incorrect designation of the subject matter of the discussion at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon on Tuesday. The Chamber of Commerce never advocated the actual removal of the pepper tree, but merely accepted it as a topic for discussion. The discussion did not reveal any desire to remove the tree, but a widespread sentiment in the city that existing conditions under and around the pepper tree in question should be corrected.

It was the unanimous desire of those present at the luncheon, as well as the reported wish of many not able to attend, that the Chamber of Commerce communicate to the Board of Trustees their request that the benches and other obstructions be removed from under the pepper tree, that the walks and streets in the business district remain free from such obstructions, that loafing upon these public streets and walks be prohibited, and that the prohibition be enforced.

The topic for discussion next Tuesday is "Placing a Distinctive Mark Upon the Mountain Side Above Sierra Madre."

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. G. Twycross enjoyed a visit on Wednesday from Miss Emily McFadden of Cedar Grove, Me., and Mr. and Mrs. Parlin of San Gabriel, also former residents of Maine. The McFadden and Twycross homes adjoined and the surprise visit was most enjoyable.

FOREIGN SOLICITORS TAKE BIG TOLL

Large Amount of Money Taken Out of Town Every Year by Slick Outsiders.

Every town suffers more or less from the pest of outside solicitors whose business sometimes almost falls into the class of "depredations." The Helmet News discusses the system as follows:

"How to handle the numerous solicitors that visit the average town in the course of the year is a perplexing problem. Some of the solicitors have worthy projects, but there are many who should receive the deaf ear of all. The unfortunate cripple is sometimes hard to turn away, but there are state laws that provide means of support to the unfortunate unable to support themselves."

When young men or women of sound mind and body hunt for some easy way of making a living by gaining the sympathy of the public it is time they were given the cold shoulder and told that they ought to go to work at some legitimate occupation, and at this season of the year there is no excuse for the man who will not work."

"Nearly every week there is an advertising solicitor abroad to get up a program or specialty of some sort. They usually charge three or four times the amount necessary to get the job printed, and in most instances the project has little or no merit."

"Many towns are pondering over the subject and are looking for a way of disposing of the strange solicitor, whether it be for the magazine subscription or any other cause. Some years ago Hemet adopted the plan of asking the solicitor to get the approval of the Chamber of Commerce, and if the merchants and others importuned would take the trouble of calling up the secretary when asked to make a subscription or donation to a doubtful enterprise they would save considerable money during the year."

"When a solicitor comes along just ask him if he has credentials from the Chamber of Commerce, and if they are not produced refuse to subscribe."

PICTURES PRESENTED TO C. OF C. OFFICE

Two beautiful, handsomely framed enlargements of the Southern California Edison Company's power plants on Big Creek have recently been hung in the office of the Chamber of Commerce. They improve the appearance of the office wonderfully and were secured through the courtesy of Mr. Fred Schwartz of the Southern California Edison Company.

C. O. D. MAIL PUT UNDER POSTAL BAN

Postoffice Department Issues Warning on Fraudulent Ads.

Warning the public against fraudulent advertisements of articles alleged to be sent C. O. D. with inspection privileges has been issued by the postoffice department, which states: "It is impossible under the postal regulations for any article to be sent C. O. D. and at the same time be submitted to inspection by the receiver."

"Firms advertising any articles to be sent this way are generally selling some fraudulent article. They know the postal regulations and undoubtedly are aware that, under the rules of the postoffice department, once a C. O. D. package has been opened by the addressee, payment is mandatory and there is no redress for misrepresentation other than by taking the matter up with the postmaster general for misuse of the mails or by securing a refund from the company."

"Neither method is likely to produce other results than to force the fraudulent concern out of business. Firms advertising in this way are generally fly-by-night propositions and are hard to catch."

"Postmasters have been ordered not to accept for shipment any C. O. D. package or parcel bearing a label which states the contents are subject to inspection. If such a package is slipped through by oversight, it cannot be delivered with the inspection condition. Because of this fact, the purchaser often blames the postoffice department for their imprudent purchase."

"This abuse of the mails has become so flagrant that the postmaster general is calling it to the attention of all postmasters, urging the co-operation of the public in detecting these fraudulent schemes. Persons seeing such advertisements in papers or magazines are urged to call them to the attention of their local postmaster."

ELKS COLLECT $100 FOR SALVATION ARMY

Just $100 was collected in Sierra Madre for the Salvation Army by the members of the B. P. O. E. in the campaign which closed on Tuesday. This campaign was supplementary to that conducted several months ago and which did not raise sufficient funds for the needs of the Salvation Army. On account of the previous failure the Elks agreed to undertake the new campaign. Practically the entire work of local solicitation was carried on by Curtis Goodenow.

City Tax Rate Set at $2.01 For Next Year

Sierra Madre's city tax rate for the coming fiscal year will be $2.01 on each $100 assessed valuation. This was determined at last night's meeting of the city trustees.

Revenue necessary to be raised will be $46,303.27. The assessed valuation is $2,303,600. The tax rate will be divided as follows: General fund, $1; water bonds and interest, 88 cents; library fund, 13 cents; total, $2.01.

Before taking action on the tax rate the trustees heard various citizens make appeals for municipal support for various purposes. Mrs. J. Milton Steinberger spoke for the Community Sing, Major C. S. Floyd for advertising funds, D. C. Ashmore for the public library, and George B. Morgridge for a beginning on the city park enterprise.

Chairman Topping said that the library fund could be taken care of on account of the tax levy being separate from that for other municipal purposes. The other matters must necessarily be subject to the limitation of $1.00 for general city purposes, and all the board could do would be to set it at that figure and distribute the revenue as equitably as possible. It was pointed out, however, that the funds for the park property could appropriately be taken from water revenue funds.

SIERRA MADRE TEACHER HONORED AT REUNION

The Iron River, Mich., Daily Register recently contained an account of an interesting reunion held in honor of Mrs. Zayda Leonard, teacher of Domestic Science in the local schools, from which the following is reprinted:

"A reunion of a number of former teachers in the Crystal Falls schools was held in Ypsilanti, Mich., July 14, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wortley. The reunion was held in honor of Mrs. George W. Leonard of Sierra Madre, Cal. Mrs. Leonard was Miss Zayda Fish and taught here at the same time as Mrs. Wortley. Mrs. Leonard with her mother, Mrs. V. J. Fish, and her son Robert, are visiting at the present time with Robert Mums of this city. The Sunday following the reunion Mrs. Leonard, Mrs. Fish and Mr. and Mrs. Wortley visited Mr. and Mrs. Frost at Ann Arbor. From Ypsilanti Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Fish went to Detroit as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allison. After another short visit in Ypsilanti they came to Crystal Falls and will spend the rest of the summer here."

HOW TO REPLACE MISSING GRAPEVINES

Some valuable suggestions on the difficult problem of replacing missing vines are contained in Circular No.
249 just issued by the University of California Experiment Station. According to Prof. E. T. Bioletti of the Division of Viticulture, author of the circular, the loss on a Muscat vineyard with a normal crop of six tons per acre is about 980 pounds per acre for every ten per cent of missing vines and about 680 pounds in a similar Sultana vineyard.

Circular No. 249 describes a new method of replanting vines by the process of layering, which gives much more successful results than the methods followed heretofore. A copy of Circular 249 may be obtained by addressing the Director of the Experiment Station.

Life Line's BY HMC

Perhaps I'll iron all day to get my garment into shape. I like to have my best gown looking fit. And, then, perhaps, I'll find that I am in an awful scrape, 'cause tiny, dirty hands have ruined it.

And, too, I'll likely toll an hour to put my hair up right; to make it stay the way it ought to be. And suddenly it loses all its style; becomes a fright, because these hands have torn the hairpins free.

The bedroom closet's tidied up;
I've laid all things away. The shoes, the gowns, and other things all placed. And then a little, tiny mite creeps slowly o'er that way and soon the whole affair is much disgraced.

The living room, the dining room,
in fact, our "Home, Sweet Home," from one end to the other has been blurred. It's just because the little one has learned the creeping room, that all this frightful wrecking has occurred.

And do I mind these baby pranks,
and does it make me mad? Well, hardly, folks! I take such things with ease. The fact that baby creeps and plays has only made me glad.
Her little hands can do just as they please.

PRAISE FROM CRITIC FOR MITCHELL'S VERSE

Editor of Saturday Night Presents Appreciative Review of "My Pepper Tree."

The following highly appreciative review of Jack Mitchell's little book of verse appeared in last week's issue of Los Angeles Saturday Night. Coming from the pen of Samuel T. Clover, one of the keenest literary critics of the west, the author may well be proud of the recognition his little book has received:

"Heretofore, Saturday Night has referred to the poetic gifts of Jack Mitchell, one of Uncle Sam's returned soldiers, now living in Sierra Madre, with his young family. From the Sierra Madre Press has issued a modest collection of Jack Mitchell's poems titled 'My Pepper Tree and Other Verse.' The contents evince genuine feeling, graceful imagery and a craftsmanship that is surprisingly good considering the lack of opportunities of the author. While, at times, the scansion is not impeccable and the rhyming, perhaps, a trifle forced, the pictures are true, the sentiment honest and the songs always in key. Whether Jack's theme is the hills of Sierra Madre, the old life with the troops or a glimpse of home joys, he never fails of his purpose, which is to reveal a frank contentedness with his environment. It is not merely rhymed words he has collected but the strivings of a soul for expression. In the 30 poems offered there are half a dozen which stand out as inspired, and two, 'Non-Readjustable'—the lure of the line for the rank-and-file soldier—and 'Recessional,' of exceptional merit. Space will only admit quotation of the latter:

"Here where the sun shines longest,
Here where the mountains smile,
Here where the handclasp's strongest,
Lord, let me linger awhile.

"Here where you painted the rarest
Blue in the sapphire sky,
Here where you gave of your fairest,
Lord, let me rest when I die."

"Mr. G. B. Morgridge, editor of the Sierra Madre News, has written an appreciative little foreword, bound in sage-green, flexible boards, suggestive of a morning haze, the booklet is attractively presented."

FOR CHIEF JUSTICE,

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION WILL DETERMINE WHO IS TO BE
THE NEXT CHIEF JUSTICE.

Re-Elect Congressman LINEBERGER

Primary Election Tuesday, August 29th.

WHAT THE DRY LEADERS SAY ABOUT HIM:

Congressman A. J. Volstead says:

"Since Mr. Lineberger has been a member of the House he has staunchly supported this amendment (Eighteenth Amendment and the National Prohibition Act) and all legislation designed to enforce it."

Dr. Clarence True Wilson says:

" * * * throughout your term here you had not only been a loyal supporter of the Prohibition movement and of all the reform matters that were up, but one of the most aggressive friends we had in Congress of the United States."

Wayne B. Wheeler says:

" * * * your outstanding advocacy of Prohibition and its enforcement and your vote for the supplemental Volstead Act, or Anti-Beer Bill, and the aggressive help which you have given the friends of prohibition enforcement entitles you to the confidence of the friends of this cause in your district."

Congressman A. P. Nelson says:

"Permit me to say that you are regarded by your colleagues as one of the outstanding proponents of the Eighteenth Amendment and its rigid enforcement."

Congressman William D. Upshaw says:

" * * * from the standpoint of a 'dry' Democrat to a 'dry' Republican * * * I am tremendously anxious to see men of your stalwart type remain in Congress as a champion of law enforcement and clean government."

NINTH DISTRICT REPUBLICAN CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE

VISITS 11,000 HOMES IN HIS CAMPAIGN

J. R. Coastler is Reaching An Amazing Number of Voters in the Ninth District.

Making a house-to-house canvass over as much of the Ninth congressional district as he can cover, Jesse R. Coastler of Sierra Madre estimates that he has personally visited 11,000 homes, in addition to many hundreds of business houses. With his wife as a guide, he has made a record for travel that would tax the strength of any candidate.

If you want to make Coastler mad, just suggest to him that sympathy for his blindness might have something to do with a favorable attitude toward him. He says he does not court that kind of support, but is determined to make the race because he believes he can be of service to the district. The fact that he lost his sight in an engagement in the Spanish-American war has no bearings on his qualifications to serve as congressman.

Mr. Coastler said yesterday he would not trade chances with either of his opponents, Lineberger or Randall. He has received assurances of support from so many sources that he says the race looks better to him all the time.

W. A. EVANS OWNER OF

BLUE RIBBON HEN

Twenty-nine eggs in a 31-day month was the blue ribbon performance of a White Leghorn hen belonging to W. A. Evans of Sierra Madre in the July contest of the Southern California Farm Bureau. There were 48 entries of ten hens to a pen in the contest, entered from all over Southern California. The contest is a part of the Farm Bureau's extensive program to discover and make known the best methods in poultry raising and the performance of Mr. Evans' hen brings him a great deal of credit, as well as the first prize ribbon.

POULTRY MEETING

DELAYED TO AUG. 22

The meeting for poultrymen called for August 18th, at which Prof. James E. Rice of Cornell was scheduled to speak, has been postponed until Tuesday evening, August 22nd, at 8 p. m. This meeting will be held in the auditorium of the Central Intermediate High School, which is located at 451 North Hill Street. This is the old Los Angeles High School building. Professor Rice is one of the best known poultrymen in the country and this is an exceptional opportunity for poultrymen to hear him. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Poultrymen's Department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, together with the Los Angeles Center of that organization.

IRRIGATION METHOD

FIELD LABORATORY

An irrigation field laboratory, probably the most complete of any in the West, will soon be in operation at the University Farm. The laboratory will be equipped to test and demonstrate all of the standard irrigation equipment used in irrigation practice, either in connection with concrete pipe or open ditches.

Special emphasis has been given to equipment for use in orchard irrigation, illustrating the various methods to be used under varying conditions of irrigation head, soil type and topography of the land. A vineyard has been laid out on a steep side hill, showing the method of contour planting and irrigation. Here is shown the various means by which water may be taken from concrete pipe lines laid on steep slopes. The water measuring laboratory has also been brought up-to-date by the addition of more recently developed measuring devices.

Pinks All the Year.

The ginko or maiden-hair tree has bright yellow foliage that is most useful in ornamental plantings, says the American Forestry Magazine. Not only is the color a clear pure yellow but the peculiar shape of the leaf gives a texture to the tree that is quite different from others. The leaves are shaped much like the pinnae, that is, the smallest divisions of the frond of the maiden-hair fern, very much enlarged. The tree is attractive at all seasons.

A FLYER IN AUGERS

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Who is that young lady?" John Ames asked. "The one with the grayhound" and both his tone and his eyes had lost their bored expression.

"She's a live producer," the captain of the "bell-hops" enthusiastically stated. "She comes into the hotel every Wednesday afternoon for tea and she tips like the rest of the family. Her brother's the cleanest sport in town."

"Who is she?" the black-haired John Ames repeated with a smile.

"It's Miss Greenwood," replied the mop-headed captain. "Say, she's the sweetest looking that comes into the Tyler Avenue hotel. Her old man used to bring her when she was just a little kid; but he's dead. He was a good sport, too."

"Are the Greenwoods in business?" and Ames watched the attractive girl until she was lost in the maze of fashionable shoppers.

"I should say so some!" bragged the captain, who was intense in his local patriotism. "Greenwood Square Hole Auger company, half a million dollars. How do you like the town?"

"A little better," acknowledged Ames. "I think I shall stay a while."

Chapter II.

"Have you any square-hole augers?" asked Ames, in the leading hardware store.

"Greenwood or Diggins?" asked the languid clerk in return.

"Which is the better?" Ames interestedly inquired.

"Not much difference," said the clerk, examining a fingernail. "Diggins is a dollar cheaper, but it's lighter weight."

"I see," mused Ames. "Competitive proposition, eh? The Greenwood is manufactured here, I believe."

"Both," and the clerk looked wearily out of the window. "Would you like to look at them?"

"No, I think I'll take one of each," decided Ames. "You may send them around to the Tyler Avenue hotel," and he reached for his pocketbook. He pondered a moment. "Which is the larger concern?"

"Diggins," replied the clerk, yawning as he prepared to make out a sales slip.

Ames sat up with his two square-hole augers until 4 o'clock in the morning, and when he arose, he hunted up a patent lawyer.

Chapter III.

"Can't take on anything more just now," promptly decided President Diggins, of the Diggins Mortising Auger company, though he nevertheless cast another interested glance at the sketches Ames had made for him.

"There's nothing aids, in competition like the addition of up-to-date devices," pleasantly urged Ames.

Diggins, who was a bony-faced man of forty-five, considered that argument gravely, as he did all gravely advanced suggestions.

"I'll admit that a machine like this, if it were practical, would be a good advertisement, but what we need is a dividend producer."

"That's what I consider this," argued Ames, taking a speculative survey of the office. It was severely furnished, and bore the marks of good business system and concentration. "A motor attachment for large boring would solve, what is now a difficult problem in heavy wooden construction. A feed wire can be cut in by the electric light company, within never over half a block from any important work."

Diggins shook his head. "It's tempting," he admitted, "but this company is concentrated on the manufacture of ordinary square-hole augers. In fact," and he smiled, "we'd like to manufacture them all."

"Competition very keen?" suggested Ames, now covertly intent on Diggins' hard lips.

"Pretty fierce," the man acknowledged, with vexation on his brow. "To tell the truth, there'll never be big money in the business for anyone, as long as there's two of us."

Ames reached for one of his pencil sketches, and elaborated a detail.

"Young Greenwood's new in the business, isn't he?" he observed.

"Father took him out of college three years ago, and died shortly afterwards," Diggins replied, again with that vexation on his brow. "By George that young fellow holds on desperately!" added Diggins determinedly.

Ames smiled as he sketched. "He might hold on indefinitely," he stated. "Sometimes these young fellows do."

"Offener they don't" snapped Diggins. "Young Greenwood has qualities that are bound to get him in the end. He tries to make the auger business artistic. The old man had kid glove methods, but the young fellow's idiotically extravagant, fancy labels and embossed stationery, and such things. Why, he even has a pigskin waste basket with a gold monogram, in his office. A fellow with such ideas can't be a practical business manager."

Ames laughed. "My fancy motor auger might appeal to him," he speculated.

"Not at the price you wanted to hold me up for," chuckled Diggins. "The Greenwood company will never pay royalty and a ten-thousand dollar bonus on an untried device, for which you haven't even a patent."

"The application I filed yesterday protects it," returned Ames easily. "I think I'll see him."

"Do!" urged Diggins. "Good Lord, I hope he takes it, and ties up some money in it. I might get him quicker."

Chapter IV.

John Ames smiled as he recognized the notorious pigskin waste basket with the gold monogram, and he smiled, too, as he inspected the immaculately groomed young Richard Greenwood, who wore a gardenia, and had a gold-mounted desk set in front of him.

"I have an improvement in square-hole boring machinery, which I should like to try out," began Ames, approaching Margaret Greenwood's brother with a far different proposition from the exaggerated one he had presented to Diggins.

"Sit down," invited young Greenwood, whose manners were pleasant and whose speech was suave. Also, he had an eager eye, which Ames rather liked.

"It's a motor auger," explained Ames lightly, laying down his sketches.

Young Greenwood looked over the drawings with quick comprehension, then he passed them back.

"It might be a thoroughly practical device, though it would have a restricted sale, as compared with our regular product," he commented. "However, the Greenwood company is not now in a position to take it up."

"I don't ask you to," responded Ames. "First of all, I'm curious to satisfy myself with its possibilities. All I would propose, just now, would be to experiment, in some out-of-the-way corner of your shop, until I can prove the thing to be mechanically feasible. Then, if you like it, we can talk business."

Young Greenwood pondered the matter carefully, meanwhile inspecting the polished Ames with a growing cordiality.

"I think we might be able to arrange that," he decided.

Chapter V.

"Looks like a failure, Rick," said Ames, as they lunched in the busy grill room of the Tyler Avenue hotel. "I've worked three weeks with the blooming thing, and I can't seem to simplify it."

"I wouldn't give it up, John," urged young Greenwood. "I'd feel lonesome to see your corner unoccupied."

"Hello, Ames!" hailed a solid looking gray-haired man, with stern eyebrows, and a crisp mouth. "How are you, Greenwood?"

"How do, Cuspad," returned both Ames and Greenwood.

"Nice chap," commented Ames. "You don't buy your tool steel from him."

"I don't believe in feeding the enemy," laughed Greenwood.

"He's the biggest gun in the tool steel game, isn't he?"

"By all odds," replied Rick Greenwood. "He's worth about three millions. Hello, Walter!"

"Hello, boys!" greeted a thin man with a network of wrinkles between his eyes. He stopped on his way to his table, and shook hands heartily with Ames.

"Great billiards you played with Tullingham last night. Glad to see you beat Hal. He's too cocky about his three-cushion game."

"Nice bunch of fellows on Diggins' board of directors," observed Greenwood, when Henderson had passed on. Cuspad and Walter and Tullingham are all men with heavy interests who can still enjoy life."

"Yes," agreed Ames with a smile, and hesitated for a moment. "I've formed a very agreeable acquaintance here, Rick. I chum with eight fine fellows, besides yourself, and they're all on Diggins' board of directors."

Greenwood looked at him with startled speculation. "That's curious," he said, reflecting that Ames had been given access to the Greenwood factory for three weeks.

"Yes," again admitted Ames. "I've been learning all I can about the square-hole auger industry."

Again Greenwood studied him critically.

"I didn't know you were interested," he observed.

"I'm interested in all business problems," Ames told him. "It worries me to see a big commercial waste. Square-hole augers are a necessity. There's a constant sale for them, and nobody makes any money. That's wrong."

"By George, I didn't make the condition," said Greenwood earnestly. "When my father died, we were making money, but the moment I took hold of the business, Diggins began to cut prices."

"Naturally," laughed Ames. "He wanted the field to himself."

"He can't have it!" declared Greenwood sharply. "I met his reductions down to our present figure, and then I quit. Diggins cheapened his product a trifle, and went still lower; but I wouldn't do it."

"Good boy," approved Ames. "He's probably taken a lot of business from you."

"We've about held our own," asserted Greenwood, with little knots of muscles working in his jaw. "My father made the first square-hole auger, and I'll keep that business going with the same standard of quality the governor maintained, if we only turn out one auger a year, and I'll discount every bill as the governor always did."

Ames broke bread.

"You'll win," he prophesied. "Diggins is spending a barrel of money in advertising, and his agents are known as liberal entertainers. Rick, how much will you give me for ridding you of the Diggins Mortising Auger company?"

"Where do you keep it?" laughed Greenwood. "Frankly, John, even if your offer were in earnest, I'd be embarrassed. I haven't drawn but one-fourth of my salary during the past year."

"If you had control of the Diggins company, I guess you could raise a few thousand, couldn't you?" smiled Ames, much as if he were still joking.

"Come out to dinner tonight and talk it over," invited Greenwood, laughing. "I have a mighty pretty sister I want you to meet."

"I accept with pleasure," replied John Ames, who for three weeks had awaited this invitation.

Chapter VI.

Yes, she was pretty, John Ames admitted, as the stately Margaret swept across to him. She was more than pretty; she was stunningly beautiful.

"How Did You Come to Buy That Thing, Rick?" He Asked.

"You are most welcome," she said in a low, well modulated voice, of peculiar richness, and she extended a long, tapering hand.

"I know you well through one of your most devoted admirers," he told her.

"Rick," she guessed, laughing, and her laugh had even more of that fascinating timbre which had been apparent in her greeting. "He bores everybody that way. He needs a girl of his own."

"You've spoiled me, sis," Rick returned, patting her on the shoulder.

Mrs. Greenwood entered, a merry looking woman, who seemed as if her life had been cast in pleasant places. She elevated her brows, just a trace, as she saw John Ames, and when she had greeted him, and had finished with the usual cheerful conventionalities, and the guest had gone over to the piano with Margaret, she turned to her son with sparkling enthusiasm.

"Where did you get him?" she demanded.

"Don't know him from Adam, Mummy," Rick shamelessly confessed. "He's never mentioned his private affairs to me, but I've been around him long enough to know that he's all right."

"Indeed he is," promptly agreed Mrs. Greenwood. "He's the handsomest thing I ever saw outside of the family. Aren't they a stunning couple, Rick?"

"At it again," teased her son. "You're always picking the scenery for Sis."

"Well, she's so beautiful herself, that she should have a handsome man," worried Mrs. Greenwood, "and she's always going around with some homely fellow."

"That isn't fair, mother," protested Rick. "Margaret's bunch do run small to the dozen, come to think of it, but they're a corking nice lot of fellows."

"She wouldn't have them if they weren't," instantly defended Mrs. Greenwood. "Don't you know anything about him?" she eagerly whispered.

Rick laughed so heartily that the pair at the piano glanced over.

They were discussing music most volubly over there, and Margaret had lightly run over two or three passages from memory, to show the similarity between a composition of Chopin's and one of Paderevski's.

"The similarity is there," granted Ames, "but it can't be called plagiarism, for both had their source in Bach. If you have Bach here, I think I can find the original."

She moved lightly to the well-stocked shelves, and, with eager interest brought him the volume of Bach. He found the passage, and played it for her.

"That's glorious!" she exclaimed, with a sparkle of admiration in her big eyes and in her voice.

He glanced at her quickly. That peculiar vibration in her voice had thrilled him. She caught his look, but there was no change in her.

"Of course you couldn't play it again that way," she regretted.

"I'm afraid not," he smiled, yielding the seat to her. "I know you sing."

"Simple little melodies," she admitted.

"Sing him that Prettien Lassen thing, sis," called Rick from across the room.

"Mit Deinen Blauen Augen?" she laughed, as she searched for it. "Will you never tire of it, Rick?"

"Not so long as I'm fond of blondes," he grinned.

She found the music and sang; simply, expressively, but with that wonderful timbre which had so held him since her first word.

Was there a certain coldness about her? There was fire in the depths of her eyes, there was warmth in her lips, there was throbbing life in her voice; and yet, when dinner was called, and he took her hand to assist her from the piano, he was puzzled again.

She was an entertaining companion, a clever talker and a flattering listener; and they liked each other.

"Well, Rick, let's get down to business," suggested Ames, as the two Stability starts with the crude

One of the most important requirements of a good motor oil is that it possess stability—that is, that it maintain its chemical composition and its lubricating body under all conditions of engine operation.

If an oil changes its chemical composition—"breaks down"—at high operating temperatures, it can no longer maintain a lubricating film between the bearing surfaces, and its value as a lubricant is destroyed.

Certain crude oils possess a higher degree of stability than others. Because of its large production of practically every type of crude, this company is free to choose for the making of Zerolene only those crudes which are particularly adapted for the purpose.

The Patented Vacuum Process

In the process of distilling and refining these selected crudes, it is of the greatest importance not to destroy their natural "oiliness" and stability. For this reason we employ our own patented high-vacuum process exclusively. By this process the oil produced—Zerolene—retains all the natural "oiliness" and stability of the original, selected crude from which it is made.

No other refiner on the Pacific Coast uses any form of vacuum distillation. No other refiner in the United States uses as high a vacuum as this company.

Zerolene of the correct grade for your car gives perfect lubrication and permits the development of maximum power, speed and gasoline mileage.

HOW TO CONSTRUCT SIMPLE RADIO SETS

Materials That Are Necessary and Method of Assembling and Mounting Them.

For those who would like to construct a simple nonregenerative vacuum tube receiver, the details of several sets will be given, before taking up the explanation of the vacuum

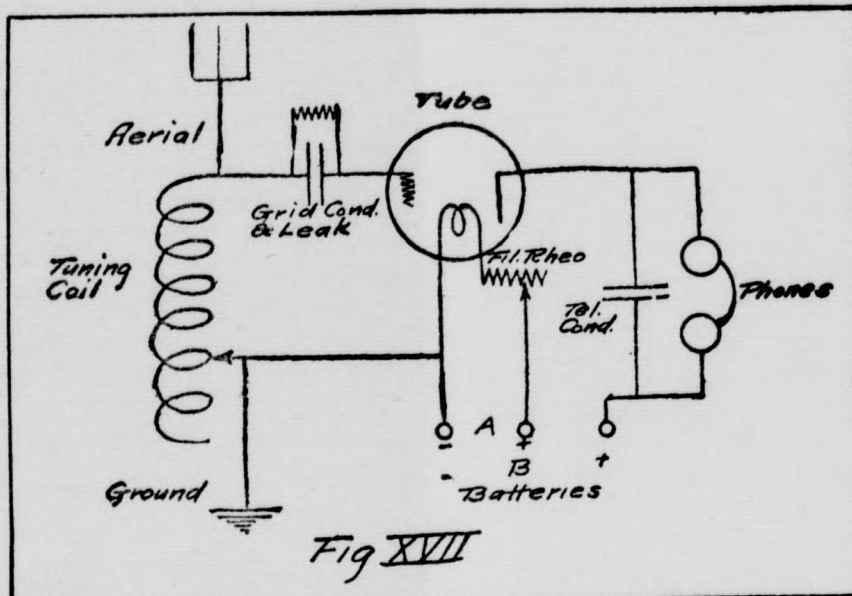

Five binding posts.

This set requires, of course, an "A" battery to light the vacuum tube filament and a "B" battery to furnish the plate potential. The "A" battery should be a six-volt storage battery of not less than 20 ampere hours' capacity. One 22½-volt "B" battery unit is necessary for a source of plate potential.

Assembling the Coil.

Starting one-half inch from one end of the cardboard tube, wind on the No. 22 DCC wire until within one-half inch of the other end of the tube. Fasten one end of the winding to the tube, but allow some surplus wire on the other end for making a connection. After the winding is in place apply a thin coat of orange shellac to hold the turns in place.

Assemble the circular-cut pieces of wood in the geometrical center of diameter of the cardboard tubing and between ¾ and ½ inch thick.

Two binding posts. Some orange shellac.

The Detector.

A type U V Radiotron vacuum tube which sells for $5.

The standard vacuum tube socket costing about $1.

A filament rheostat of 6-11 ohms resistance costing about $11.

A combination grid condenser and grid leak for the U V 200 Radiotron costing 55 cents.

In addition a phone condenser costing 50 cents.

One pair of Murdock No. 56 receivers costing $6.

For mounting on base board:

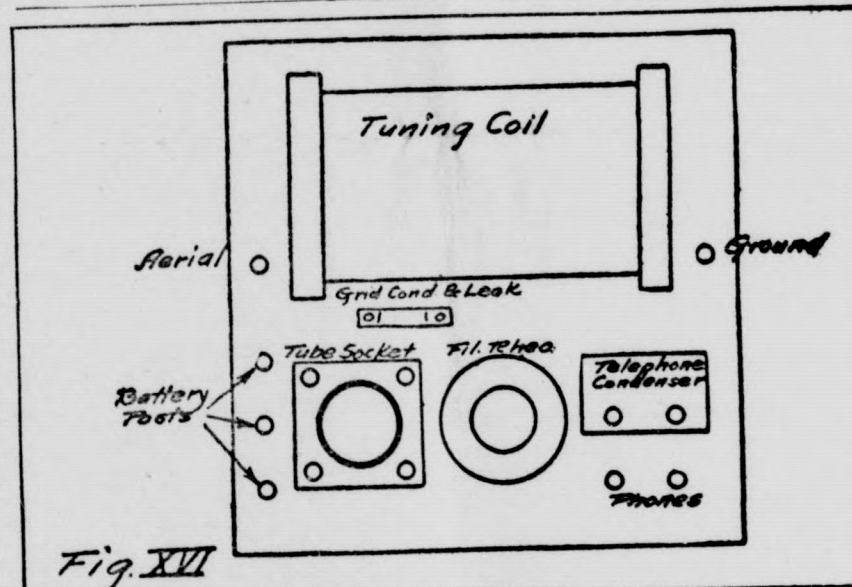

One piece of wood eight inches square.

one-fourth inch in from each end so that the rod is fastened in place; see that the contact finger on the bottom of the slider can at all times make good contact with the windings. Mount a binding post on either end of the coil, attaching one by means of a wire to the slider rod and the other to the end of the wire wound on the tube, and the tuning coil is complete.

Mounting the Set on Base Board.

It is only necessary now to mount the component parts on the base board and connect them up.

Fig. 16 shows the relative positions of the instrument mounted on an eight-inch square base board, with the actual wiring diagram. Fig. 17 shows a schematic diagram of the wiring of the same set.

tube as an amplifier. The circuits which will be described depend upon the vacuum tube for a detector or as a rectifier not having the additional function of an oscillator.

The first set described will be that of a tuning coil mounted on a horizontal base board. The following material is necessary for its construction:

The Tuning Coil.

A piece of cardboard tubing, outside diameter, three inches, and five inches long. It will cost about 10 cents.

One hundred feet of No. 22 DCC magnet wire. Cost about 25 cents.

One standard slider to fit ¾ by ¼-inch brass rod. Cost about 40 cents.

A six-inch length of ¼ by ¼-inch square brass rod. Cost about 20 cents.

Two circular blocks of wood, whose diameter is just equal to the inside square blocks and then shellac or varnish them for appearance' sake.

When thoroughly dry slip the two end blocks into the wound tube and by means of a few finishing brads driven through the cardboard tube fasten the end blocks to the wound tube.

The slider is to be mounted on top of the coil and should be capable of making contact with any turn of the wire on the tube. In order to remove the insulation from the wire, just under the rod where the slider moves back and forth wrap a piece of sandpaper around a thin piece of wood and, using another piece of wood as a guide, sandpaper the insulation from the winding.

Drill a hole one-eighth inch in diameter through the slider rod about

GREAT PLANT IN MELBOURNE

Australian City Is Building Radio Station for Direct Communication With Great Britain.

The work of establishing the mammoth Australian radio station in Melbourne for direct communication with Great Britain has been begun.

The substations for overseas traffic will be about three times as powerful as any European station today. It will take two years before the central and feeder stations are completed. As a normal performance the chief station will be able to speak direct over 12,000 miles for the greater part of any working day.

Receiving and sending stations to correspond will be built in Canada during the same period. The plant for the main station will be imported from England, but the plant for the feeder stations will be manufactured in Australia, one for each of the states.

The combined cost of all these stations will be about $5,000,000. The main station will consist of a transmitter and receiver terminal thirty miles apart, the latter including twenty-four towers each 800 feet high spread over a square mile.

The wireless rates will be one-third less than the present cable rates to Europe.

SHORT FLASHES

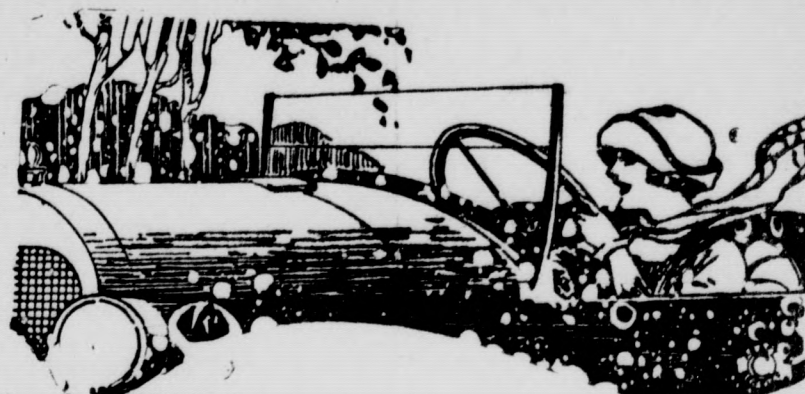

San Francisco is receiving concerts broadcast at Schenectady, N. Y.

In New York a squad of soldiers was drilled in an armory uptown at the commands of a superior on Governor's Island.

At the Pacific coast seaside resorts, instead of burying themselves in the sand, the young ladies clamp on their earpieces and kill time between swims listening to radio music.

Educational experts say that radio will prove of great assistance in the development of the minds of subnormal children. The great obstacle in their education has been inability to arouse interest. It is believed that radio will greatly stimulate such interest.

And now it is the dentists who are profiting by radio. It is a great advantage to keep the mind of a patient off his troubles. When a radio ear-piece is clamped on, what registers on the ears of the sufferer makes him more or less indifferent to what is going on in his mouth. Great possibilities for the soothing talker.

POSTOFFICE LEASE RENEWED 5 YEARS

Department Accepts Proposal to Continue in the Present Location.

Word has been received by the News from Senator Shortridge that the postoffice department has accepted the proposal of Mrs. Mary D. Caley for a new five-year lease on the present postoffice quarters. The lease includes fixtures, light, heat, water, etc. No other proposals were received when the bids were advertised for by the department. The inspector who came to investigate the advisability of accepting the bid for the Caley building found there was nothing left available. As the present location is probably the best location in town, anyway, he recommended that it be accepted.

RANDOM REMARKS

OF TRAIL TRAMPS

want to leave Fern Lodge."

Trail Changed Again.

In the old days we began to zigzag up the ridge at Fern Lodge. Now we followed the stream bed.

"What an improvement. It's lot's prettier, as well as cooler, down here in the shade of the maples and alders, instead of up there in the sun between two walls of brush."

"Shall we stop at Sturtevant's?"

"Yes, just to see if it is as cold as it was the time we got in from the West Fork at nine and found the camp season had closed. We found they had the hardest boards and the coldest October wind in the mountains that night."

Over the Divide.

Just by way of contrast from our last trip, we continued toward the West Fork divide while the sun was still high enough to shine on our backs. We had hoped he would be down behind Mt. Wilson, but there he was, patting us on the back.

"Remember when we came over here in the dark and had to feel our way?"

"Every one of those rocks I stumbled over is still here in the trail."

"If there were not so many zigs in this trail there would not be so many zags!"

"Here, take my knapsack awhile so I can get that cool breeze on my back."

"And to think I left a loving family, a good job and an electric fan for this."

"Well, this is not so bad. Here we are on the east slope and out of the sun. There's the saddle where we cross the divide and start down hill."

Into the West Fork.
"This is a regular crossroads. There's the old trail to the West Fork ranger's cabin on the left, DeVore's new cutoff to Camp West Fork in the middle and the new trail to Monrovia Peak on the right."

"Here's where we zigzag down awhile."

"Down is right. Glad we are not climbing this grade. If we had to climb to get there I'd never be able to 'flop' at Camp West Fork tonight."

"Must be getting close. I hear a phonograph."

"Here's the old cabin where Ernest DeVore started his camp about nine years ago. Since then the camp has grown as well as his family. There's the new house across the stream, with tents all along the stream."

Two Hours Later.

"Some table Mrs. DeVore sets. Who would expect to find a fine big garden with fresh vegetables and fruit, and cows and chickens away back here? They certainly make you feel at home. With that sawmill and shop he has rigged up DeVore can go ahead and develop a wonderful camp here. He can replace a lot of these tents with permanent cabins and encourage more winter travel in the mountains."

"How do you feel after your 14 miles? Think you can sleep tonight?"

"You bet! And I hope you have learned to sleep without snoring. Remember that sawmill is across the stream and away around the bend, so you can't have that for an alibi if I have to kick you in the back to stop your racket."

ICE CREAM CAUSES SERIOUS AUTO WRECK

Monrovia News: "The dropping of an ice cream cone by a little girl resulted disastrously to her father and the Ford car in which he and his four children were driving."

"The child was sitting in the back seat of the vehicle, dropped the cone. The father, T. F. Hatcher of this city, turned around on hearing her exclamation of dismay. The steering wheel turned, too. The car ran into a telephone pole."

"The car was badly wrecked and its occupants painfully cut about the face and hands by flying glass from the broken windshield."

"The accident happened about noon near the corner of Canyon and Huntington Drive."

LEGION CONVENTION WILL DRAW CROWD

San Jose is Preparing Splendid Entertainment for Soldier Visitors.

A tentative program for the fourth annual convention of the American Legion, Department of California, to be held in San Jose four days the first week in September, has been announced by the state executive committee. The convention opens Tuesday, September 5. The credentials committee will assemble in San Jose the night of Labor Day.

According to John R. Quinn, department commander, state headquarters will be moved from San Francisco to San Jose on September 1.

Big Delegations

Many posts in California cities announce heavy quotas to the convence. Thirty-six posts in Los Angeles County expect to send nearly 1,000. Fresno will send 150 delegates, visitors, Women's Auxiliary members and Forty and Eighters. Sacramento Legionnaires, 50 strong, will revive the days of '49 by parading in costume of the old diggin's. They expect to leave their razors at home.

Through San Jose merchants, the post has raised a convention fund to care for entertainment, decorations and barbecue. Legion men here expect to show their guests that the Santa Clara valley boasts of more than prunes, posts and climate.

Prominent Speakers

Gov. Wm. D. Stephens, Col. Hanford MacNider, American Legion national commander, and the state commanders of the G. A. R. and Spanish-American war veterans will be among convention speakers.

One-way rates announced by California railroads from all points to San Jose will swell the convention attendance. Over 10,000 are expected.

The state celebration of the Native Sons will be held Admission Day and September 10, and as many Legionnaires are native Californians, the two gatherings will attract over 30,000.

MRS. M. F. M'KEE

The funeral service of the late Mrs. M. F. McKee was held in Gay's Undertaking Parlors, Sierra Madre, on Thursday, August 17th, at 2 p. m. Mrs. McKee, formerly a teacher in Seattle, was the wife of Mr. Ralph V. McKee, prominently connected with the Los Angeles Express.

There were many beautiful floral offerings and the large gathering of friends from near and far was a striking testimonial to the winsome personality and lovely character of Mrs. McKee.

Miss Gertrude Cook and Mrs. Hawks sang appropriate hymns and Rev. W. J. Thompson of the Congregational church conducted the service. The remains were taken to Pasadena for cremation.

SCHOOL CAFETERIA TO BE DISCUSSED

Meeting Called for Next Tuesday Evening to Devise Plan of Operation.

Warm noon meals for the school children may be provided during the coming year if an operating plan can be worked out by the Parent-Teacher Association. Discussion of ways and means will be the object of a meeting of the association to be held in the Kindergarten building next Tuesday evening.

To provide accommodations for a cafeteria the school trustees have arranged for an addition to the Domestic Science building, as part of the present improvement program. But the school district cannot go into the business of running the cafeteria, according to the authorities on school law. Hence the special meeting has been called for Tuesday night at 8 o'clock and it is hoped enough parents will attend to give definite assurance of support for the enterprise.

The necessary help for the cafeteria would have to be hired and supplies purchased through some other agency than the school board. However, it is thought the cafeteria would be self-supporting. It is estimated 300 children carry their lunches to school. So many parents have requested that provision be made for warm lunches, it is believed there would be no trouble in making the cafeteria pay for itself.

TWO FIRES LAST SATURDAY

The fire department had two calls in quick succession last Saturday morning. A fire in the Croxson residence at 267 W. Montecito burned a hole in the roof. The department was misdirected to East Montecito and before the wagon reached the fire it had been extinguished by neighbors. A little later a grass fire was reported near the head of Auburn Avenue. After a quick run by the truck the fire was extinguished with the chemicals.

GRAND ARMY VETERANS ARE ADMITTED FREE

Special arrangements have been made with the society, Sons of the Revolution, whereby the initiation fee of all members of the G. A. R., who can otherwise qualify for membership in the Sons of the Revolution, will be cared for during the year 1922 without calling upon the veterans to pay same, they only being required to pay the dues.

This courtesy has been arranged for by interested members in recognition of the part the veterans took in responding to the call of their country during time of need. It will be greatly appreciated by many who could not otherwise become members of the society and thus have their family records and the part their ancestors took in the wars of the country preserved for posterity.

Dr. and Mrs. George Starr entertained on Monday evening with a delightful swimming party at Pasadena Glen. After the swim the hostess served a delightful tamale supper. The guests were: Miss Gladys Midgah of Pasadena, Miss Anita Flynn of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hill, Dr. George Hazeltine and Groff Brown.

Mrs. Innis Kinney entertained at luncheon on Thursday at Kinnelon, the guests being Mmes. D. C. Ashmore, Randolph Wood and George B. Morgridge.

WIRE BRACING FOR FRUIT TREES FAVORED

The efficiency of wires, in place of wooden props for bracing bearing fruit has been found just as effective by using No. 14 galvanized wire. Not only is the wire just as effective, but the cost is only a small fraction of that for wooden props.

Wiring can be done at almost any season of the year and the wire braces do not interfere with tillage nor are they affected by irrigation. The wire braces do not interfere with cultivation and harvesting as do wooden props.

Owners of fruit trees who are interested will find the detailed method for wire bracing well described in Circular 244 of the University of California Agricultural Experiment Station, Berkeley, Cal.
